INTRODUCTION

During the long period in which Great Britain and France struggled for the supremacy on the North American continent the affairs and friendship of the Indians were of the greatest importance. This was especially true of the Iroquois and the Western Indians. In New England the settlers early became the masters except of the eastern tribes of Abenakis and their kindred. The French working through their missionaries persuaded part of the Abenakis to migrate to Canada and through them exerted much influence with those who still remained in territory claimed by the English. Numerous treaties were made between these Indians and the Governors of Massachusetts Bay; and while many of the details in the treaties that were printed seem to relate only to trade, the real object of the English was to retain the Indian friendship.

The Iroquois played a more important part than the Eastern Indians and finally came to be regarded by the British colonies as a "buffer state" between them and the French. The Iroquois were well aware of their importance to both sides and the treaties with them show what astute politicians they were.

Many of the records of the various treaties with the Indians exist only in manuscript; some have been printed in the Journals of the Governors and Councils or in the "Votes and Proceedings" of the legislative bodies; while others were separately printed. It is the object of this monograph to locate and describe such as were separately printed. A very brief synopsis of the contents of each treaty is given, and also the location of copies in the principal libraries and private collections. It is quite probable that they were printed in very small editions, which would account for their rarity at the present time. That they are rare is demonstrated by the fact that only one public library in the country contains one-third of the number of titles recorded in this monograph, while thirteen titles are known by only a single copy. And of two no copy is known to exist in America. To see the ones described it has been necessary to visit the various libraries in Boston, Worcester, New York, Philadelphia, and Chicago. Seventeen public libraries and seven private collections have been examined and the copies located in them are recorded herein.

These treaties are original sources of information of some of the most important events connected with the settlement of the country and its land titles. This is especially true of the period covered by the "Old French War," for it was during that period that the northern colonies courted the Indians as a protection against the French. Many pages in them refer to the negotiations for the return of white captives among the savages. So full are they of interesting historic details that the tendency in making the synopses in this book was to extend them too far. The synopses are intended to give only a hint as to the main subjects discussed in the treaties.

Finally, the excuse for printing this work at all is the belief of the compiler that, to the special student, the most useful bibliography is the monograph on a special subject, which can give an idea of the contents of the books described, as well as their size and location.

SYNOPSIS. At this council there were present Peter Schuyler, Mayor, "with ten more gentlemen," the representatives of the three Mohawk towns, eight of whom are named in the treaty, and two interpreters, Arnout and Hille.

The object of the council seems to have been the offering of condolences for the massacre at Schenectady and to advise as to what measures were to be taken. The Indians spoke first and after the usual condolences, stated that they had 100 young men out following the French and Canadian Indians and hoped for revenge. They reminded the Albanians that three years before they (the Mohawks) were at war with the French but that Corlaer "hindered them to proceed." But for that they would have prevented the French from sowing and reaping and they would not now have been in a position to do much mischief.

To the report of the council is appended an examination of three French prisoners who give an account of the force at Schenectady with some details of the fight as well as much information as to the state of Canada and some preparations that were being made to attack Albany.

This Treaty was reprinted in the NYHS. Collections for 1869, pp. 165 et seq.

PROPOSITIONS MADE TO GOVERNOR BELLOMONT BY THE FIVE NATIONS IN JULY, 1698, AT ALBANY.

SYNOPSIS. There were present Governor Bellomont and a numerous retinue and the representatives of all of the Five Nations; the Interpreters were Cornelius Velie and Helletie van Olanda. The conference convened on July 20. Governor Bellomont was suffering with gout. The Indians complained of an alleged sale of land by a few of the Mohawks and claimed that it was illegal and asked to have the "Writing" burned. They complained also of the attacks of the French and their Indian allies after peace was declared and of the high price of goods. They state further "that a greater evil could not have attended all of us in the five Nations as well as the brethren than the suffering the French to re-settle Candarque which will always be as a thorn in our sides and keep us in such a continual alarm and watchfulness that we shall never be able to hunt freely whilst such a power and fortress is so near not only to annoy but in a capacity to destroy us." In the discussion on this matter the Indians took occasion to correct the Governor by reciting the whole history of the negotiations and acts of Governor Fletcher relating to Candarque.

The conferences lasted until July 27th and a complete daily report is given of them. Besides these reports the printed account gives an Examination of Skachkook Indians in reference to murders at Hatfield; The Governor's report of the Albany meeting to the Council; Instructions to Col. Peter Schuyler; A Message sent by the Five Nations in August regarding their friends who were captives in Canada.

SYNOPSIS. The Governor opened the congress by a speech in which he refers to various previous treaties with the Indians.

The Indians object to the construction of a Fort but are told by the Governor that he will build a fort where he pleases. He claims land on the Kennebec River to which the Indians demur. Finally the conference is ended by the Indians withdrawing "in a hasty, abrupt manner without taking leave, and left behind them their English Colours." Later they brought to the Governor a letter of Sebastian Rasles, the Jesuit missionary, containing a message of Vaudreuill to the Indians in reference to their lands and promising help.

This Treaty is in the Maine Hist. Soc. Coll., iii, 361, and in N. H. Prov. Papers, iii, 693. See Winsor Nar. and Crit. Hist., V, 424, for other references.

Re-Printed, by Elizabeth Sadleir, for Samuel Fuller, at the Globe and Scales, in Meath Street, MDCCXXIII.

July 8. Governor Keith makes a speech of friendship with the usual presents and warns the Five Nations that they cannot pass through the colony to make war on Indians friendly to the government of Virginia. He counsels them to peace with the English and other Indians but warns them that the French are artful and not to be trusted. He promises that wrongs done them by white men will be avenged and that he will see that they are fairly treated by the traders. He says he would like to stop the liquor traffic but the Indians make that impossible.

Present at the Treaty: Governor Keith, Richard Hill, Caleb Pusey, Jonathan Dickinson, Col. John French, James Logan, Secretary, "with divers gentlemen," Deputies from the Senecas, Onondagas, and Cayugas; Interpreters Smith the Ganewese-Indian, John Cartledge, and James le Tort.

A N D T H E

Chiefs of the Indians of the Five Nations,

At ALBANY, in the Month of September, 1752.

TREATY BETWEEN GOVERNOR KEITH OF PENNSYLVANIA AND THE FIVE NA-TIONS MADE AT ALBANY IN SEPTEM-BER, 1722.

Printed at Dublin, 1723

COLLATION. This Treaty occupies pp. 28 to 45 of a volume containing the Treaty of 1721, Conestogoe [which see], and the Dying Words of Ocanickon.
COPY LOCATED. LCP.

SYNOPSIS. New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia were represented at this council by their Governors, who sailed up the Hudson on a sloop leaving New York August 17th, and arriving at Albany August 20th. This volume contains only so much of the council minutes as relates to Pennsylvania. It consists nominally of the affair of an Indian killed by white traders near Conestogoe but the speeches of Governor Keith were very conciliatory and the "chain of friendship brightened."

COPIES LOCATED. AAS. LC. MHS.

SYNOPSIS. The conference lasted from 16th July to August 11th. About forty Penobscots only were present. The English were much annoyed to find no other tribes there to ratify a peace made at Boston the previous winter. The Indians added to this annoyance by a suggestion that a conference should be held at Mont. Royal (Montreal). They were told that it was beneath English dignity to treat with Indians on French soil.

The Indians demanded the removal of two houses at Richmond and St. George, with which the English refused to comply. The Indians claimed that they did not possess a single English captive.

This Treaty and the one in Falmouth, 1727, were reprinted in Boston, 1754, by S. Kneeland, 4to, pp. 20, 27.

There is a copy of this reprint at AAS. See Winsor Nar. and Crit. Hist., V, 432, for other references to this Treaty.

SYNOPSIS. The selection of Falmouth as a meeting place seems to have been objectionable to the Indians who with the exception of the Penobscots refused to go there the year before. This year the same objection was made but a ship was sent for them and the Norridgewocks and Wowenocks came. The treaty, dated Boston, 15th December, 1725, was read and confirmed by the signatures of the four chiefs whose totems are reproduced. It attempts to settle the disputes as to land, captives, etc.

This Treaty was reprinted in 1754 with the Treaty of 1726. See Winsor Nar. and Crit. Hist., V, 432.

TWO
INDIAN TREATIES
THE ONE HELD AT CONESTOGOE

In MAY 1728.

AND THE OTHER AT

PHILADELPHIA

In JUNE following,

BETWEEN

The Honourable PATRICK GORDON Esq; Lieut.
Governour of the Province of Pennsylvania, and Counties of New-Castle, Kent, and Suffex upon Delaware,

AND

The Chiefs of the Conestogoe, Delaware, Shawanese
and Canawese Indians.

TAKEN from the Minutes of Council, and published by Authority.

THe Governour having last Fall acquainted the Indians of Conestogoe, by Mr Wright, that he designed to visit them, so soon as their People were come home out of the Woods in the Spring, received an Account about three Weeks since from Mr Wright, that Capt. Civility the Chief of those Indians with his People were returned: whereupon the Governour dispatched an Express to acquaint the Indians, that he would meet them about the 23d of May Instant at Conestogoe, where he desired that the Chiefs, of all the Indians might be present, and that Capt. Civility would dispatch Messengers to Sallowan, Opekasset and Manawky-bickon Chiefs of the Delawares, who live up the River Sasquehannah to be there.

Pursuant to this Appointment, the Governour attended with some Members of Council, and divers other Gentlemen, to the Number of about Thirty, who voluntarily offered their Company tother, set out from Philadelphia on the 22d of May, and on the 23d in the Evening came to the House of Mr. Andrew Cornith, about a Mile distant from the Indian-Town. The 24th and 25th Days were spent in waiting for some other Persons expected at the Treaty, and on the 26th the Treaty began as follows.

TWO INDIAN TREATIES HELD AT CONES-
TOGOE IN MAY, 1728, AND AT PHILA-DELPHIA, IN JUNE, 1728.

[Colophon:] Printed by Andrew Bradford, Phila.

COLLATION. Folio, pp. 17. Sigs. [A] to D in twos.

SIZE OF LETTERPRESS. 10 x 5½.

COPY LOCATED. LCP.

SYNOPSIS. The meeting at Conestogoe was May 26th and 27th. Attended by Lt.-Gov. Gordon and others and Indians of the Conestoga, Delaware, Shawanese, and Canawese tribes. The Governor related the details of trouble between the whites and Indians at Mahanatawny Iron Works and at the house of John Burt.

The meeting at Philadelphia was June 4th and 5th. Deeds of lands from the Indians dated September, 1718, were shown to the Indians to assure them that said lands had been paid for and this deed is printed in the treaty as is also the petition of Palatines in regard to their land.

SYNOPSIS. One cannot read this treaty and not be struck with the difference between the methods used with these Eastern Indians and the method followed by New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia with the Six Nations and kindred tribes. All these latter conferences and treaties were marked by great dignity and the following of set forms. No speech ever went unanswered and it was seldom answered the same day but only after taking time for deliberation. At Falmouth, Governor Belcher replied to the Indian speeches at once and pressed the Indians for immediate answers. They told him they did things only after deliberating among themselves, but it made no difference to the Governor, nor did he mark his answers with presents as the Indians did.

The Governor had been to inspect the English forts at St. George's, Brunswick, Richmond, etc., and had invited these Indians to meet him. His principal business with them seemed to be to advise them to give up the French religion and adopt that of the English and to drink less rum. The Indians tried to transact other business such as arranging for proper trading posts, regulation of hunting rights, etc., but they got short answers from His Excellency.

This Treaty was reprinted at London, 1732, and there are copies of the reprint at JCB. and Harvard. See Winsor Nar. and Crit. Hist., V, 432.

SYNOPSIS. Except the Mohawks, all the Six Nations were represented. There were about 100 Indians in all. Thomas Penn and James Logan were present, with Conrad Weiser as interpreter. The preliminary council was held at James Logan's at Stenton. They were informed that while the council would be held at Philadelphia that as there was smallpox in the town they should not spend much time there.

The object of the treaty was to confirm the one made four years before.

SYNOPSIS. There were present at this treaty delegates from the Onondagas, Cayugas, Oneidas, Senecas, Tuscaroras, Shawanese, Nanticokes, and Delawares; and one entire page is filled with the names of these delegates. The council was presided over by George Thomas, lieutenant-governor, with Conrad Weiser and Cornelius Spring as interpreters. The presents made to the Indians are specified.

The principal business was to settle the complaints that each side made against the other of encroachments on their lands. The whites promised to remove their people from the Indian lands and the Indians gave a like promise. One of the claims made by the whites was that fifty years before they had bought land at the Forks of the Delaware from the Delawares which the latter now refused to vacate. After the Indians had investigated this claim Canassatego made his famous speech to the Delawares. "But how came you to take upon you to sell land at all? We conquered you; we made women of you; you know that you are women and can no more sell land than women; nor is it fit that you should have the power to sell land since you abuse it. This land that you claim is gone through your guts. You have been furnished with clothes, meat and drink by the goods paid you for it; and now you want it again like children as you are," etc.

It was also at this treaty that the Indians expressed their good opinions of James Logan and Conrad Weiser. Of the latter they said: "The Business the Five Nations transact with you is of great consequence and requires a skillful and honest person to go between us, one in whom both you and we can place Confidence. We esteem our present Interpreter to be such a person, equally faithful in the interpretation of whatever is said to him by either of us; equally allied to both; he is of our nation and a member of our Council as well as yours. When we adopted him we divided him into two equal parts. One we kept for ourselves and one we left for you. He has had a great deal of trouble for us, wore out his shoes in our messages and dirtied his clothes by being amongst us so that he has become as nasty as an Indian."

This Treaty was reprinted in Colden's "History of the Five Indian Nations of Canada," London, 1747, p. 45.

SYNOPSIS. The Council began on the 2nd of August and closed on the 7th. On his arrival in Boston, Governor Shirley had sent a letter to those tribes notifying them of his appointment as Governor and notifying them that if they wished to send delegates to him they would be transported in the Province sloop. Accordingly they sent two delegates to Boston in December who laid before the Governor their difficulties in trade "arising from a scarcity of provisions, tobacco, powder and shot, and the truck master not understanding your language, and desired that two men might be appointed twice a year to view the truck houses; and that an account of the prices of beaver peltry and other goods might be publicly posted there." The Governor had promised to examine their complaints and the greater part of this conference was occupied in settling them.

SYNOPSIS. While this work is not the record of a treaty or Indian council, but rather a report of the evidence taken in the trial to determine the rights of the Mohegan Indians to land claimed by them and the Colony of Connecticut, it is included here on account of its relating to Indian lands about which so many treaties were made. The great length of the work prevents any adequate synopsis. The commissioners appointed to consider the cause were the Governors of New York and New Jersey with their respective councils or any five or more of them. The five who tried the cause were Cadwalader Colden, Phillip Cortlandt, and Daniel Horsmanden, of New York; and John Rodman and Robt. Hunter Morris, of New Jersey. The evidence submitted consisted of public records, Indian deeds, etc., which are copied in this report, as is also Mason's Pequot War which was put in evidence. The great importance of this record cannot be adequately shown in a brief notice. To the decision rendered Messrs. Horsmanden and Morris dissented and Mr. Horsmanden's opinion in dissent was printed in London, 1769.

SYNOPSIS. The council was convened on Friday, June 22, 1744, Lt.-Gov. George Thomas of Pennsylvania presiding, with deputies from Maryland and Virginia and from the Senecas, Onondagas, Oneidas, Cayugas, and Tuscaroras, with Conrad Weiser as Interpreter.

This treaty was held to settle the disputes between the colonies of Maryland and Virginia and the Six Nations relative to lands claimed by the Indians in those colonies. It was of such importance that it lasted until July 4th and produced a great deal of discussion in which the Indians showed much ability and a knowledge of the history of Indian affairs. The troubles were finally adjusted and payment was made to the Indians. It was during the meetings of this treaty that the Governor of Maryland received the name Tocarryhogan.

The troubles between the Six Nations and the Cherokees and Catawbas were mentioned and the Indians gave the Council a statement of the trouble.

The death of John Armstrong, an Indian trader, was discussed and the Indians promised satisfaction for his murder.

Franklin mentions this Treaty in a letter to Wm. Strahan dated Sept. 18, 1744, and says he is sending Strahan 200 copies for sale. This statement probably indicates that a large number of copies were printed, which may account for its apparently being less rare than most of the other issues.

SYNOPSIS. There were present at this treaty the Governor and deputies of New York and Commissioners from the Colonies of Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Pennsylvania, and Indians from all of the Six Nations except the Senecas. At a preliminary meeting of the Commissioners it was resolved that the New York and New England delegates should make a joint speech to the Indians and that afterward the Pennsylvania Commissioners should hold a separate council.

The joint speech of New York and New England told the Indians of the war that then existed between France and Great Britain, of the attacks and depredations of the French and their Indian allies against the English settlements, and advised the Six Nations to join the Colonies in retaliation. It reproved the Mohawks for treating with the French at Montreal a few months before. The Indians replied that they were true friends of the English and would not permit the French or their Indian Allies to cross their lands to attack the English, but that before they declared war it was necessary that they should first demand satisfaction of the Canadian Indians which would require about two months' time. They explained their conference with the French at Montreal. The answer was satisfactory to all except the Massachusetts commissioners who said that the year before at a conference at Boston between the Mohawks and Eastern Indians the former had reproved the latter for hostility to the English and threatened them with war if they committed any hostile acts. In this connection there is an interesting reference to the Boston conference in the "Itinerarium of Dr. Alexander Hamilton," privately printed by Mr. W. K. Bixby, St. Louis, 1907. Hamilton was in Boston in July, 1744, and records in his diary of July 24th, some account of this conference in which he says that Hendrick, a chief of the Mohawks, said to the Eastern Indians: "We, the Mohawks, are your fathers and you are our children. If you are dutiful and obedient, if you brighten the chain with the English our friends and take up the hatchet against the French our enemies, we will defend and protect you; but otherwise if you are disobedient and rebel you shall die every man, woman, and child of you and that by our hands. We will cut you off from this earth as an ox licketh up the grass." It was apparently this promise that the Massachusetts commissioners desired the Mohawks to make good.

The business of the Pennsylvania Commissioners related to the negotiations with the Catawbas (between whom and the Six Nations the Governor of Pennsylvania was trying to make peace) and to some Pennsylvania Indian traders who had been robbed by the Shawanese. The Indian reply to the latter matter was probably not satisfactory.

SYNOPSIS. There were present Governor George Clinton, Cadwalader Colden, Ph. Livingston, and John Rutherford of the Governor's council, and the Commissioners of Massachusetts and many others and the Indians of the Six Nations. Sir Wm. Johnson, then only Mr. Johnson, was there at the head of the Mohawks. The purpose of the conference was to get the Indians to espouse the side of the English in the war against the French. The hatchet had been given to them the previous year at the Albany conference and they had promised to try to get satisfaction from the Canadian Indians. Now, however, they promised to join in the war.

SYNOPSIS. There were present at this treaty the President and Council and a delegation of Indians of the Six Nations from the Ohio country. Conrad Weiser was present as Interpreter.

The Indians came without invitation. They informed the council that at the beginning of the war with France the Six Nations had been advised by the English Colonies to remain neutral but that after the French and some of their Indian allies had attacked the English settlements the Indians had been requested repeatedly to take up the hatchet. That the old men at Onondaga had refused to do this but that "at last the young Indians, the Warriors and Captains consulted together and resolved to take up the English hatchet against the will of their old people and to lay their old people aside as of no use but in time of Peace." This they had done and were now come to ask for more and better weapons with which to carry on their war. They also said that "When once we the young warriors engaged we put a great deal of fire under our kettle and the kettle boiled high and so it does still (meaning they carried on the war briskly) that the Frenchmen's heads might soon be boiled. But when we looked about us to see how it was with the English kettle we saw the fire was almost out and that it hardly boiled at all and that no Frenchmen's heads were like to be in it. This truly surprises us and we are come down on purpose to know the reason of it. How comes it to pass that the English who brought us into the war will not fight themselves? This has not a good appearance and therefore we give you this string of wampum to hearten and encourage you and to desire you would put more fire under your kettle."

They received a plausible answer and a small present and a promise of another present the following year and expressed themselves satisfied.

SYNOPSIS. Some of the Six Nations came to intercede for the Twightees and Shawnese who asked to be taken into the friendship of the English. The Twightees described themselves as living on the river Oubache and having twenty towns and one thousand warriors. They were received with satisfaction and a treaty was drawn up to be signed by both parties. The Shawnese on the other hand were reminded that part of their nation had broken the old treaty existing between them and they were taken on probation.

SYNOPSIS. The Council began October 13 and ended October 20th, 1752. Present the Commissioners of Massachusetts and the Penobscot and Norridgewock Indians. The object was to renew and confirm a general peace. Governor Dummer's Treaty and the one at Falmouth, 1749, had been broken by the Indians and this council promised amends. There was much discussion about the return of captives taken at Swan Island and North Yarmouth.

SYNOPSIS. This treaty is printed in parallel columns in English and French. There are eight articles. The first article renews former treaties. The second buries the hatchet; the third makes an offensive and defensive alliance; the fourth relates to hunting and fishing privileges and the Indian trade; the fifth and sixth relate to presents of food, blankets, etc., to be given annually to the Indians. The seventh binds the Indians to aid shipwrecked mariners and conduct them to Halifax; and the eighth determines the manner of settling disputes. The Treaty was signed at Halifax, Nov. 22, 1752.

SYNOPSIS. There were present for Pennsylvania, Richard Peters, Isaac Norris, and Benj. Franklin. The Indians represented were the Twightees, Shawnese, Wyandots, Delawares, and those of the Six Nations residing on the Ohio. The interpreters were George Croghan, Andrew Montour, and Conrad Weiser.

The Indians had lately held a conference with Virginia at Winchester. They came to ask for assistance against the French who at that time had an expedition in their country. It was this French expedition that Washington met later in the year. The Indians got a few presents and some kind words and were hurried home to protect their frontiers.

SYNOPSIS. The meetings were from June 28 to July 6th. The first meetings were with the Norridgewocks. Governor Shirley had come to them at their request instead of sending commissioners. He told them he proposed to build a fort on the Kennebec, to which the Indians objected. There was much talk of the various Indian depredations in the past two years and some plain language used on both sides. The Norridgewocks attempted to put the blame of some outrages on the "Albany" Indians but Governor Shirley gave the names of the leaders showing them to be Eastern Indians. Things were made smooth as they usually were at Indian treaties and a general understanding arrived at.

The Penobscots had agreed to be present but were not there when the Governor arrived. Fearing from a French letter that he had intercepted, and which is printed in the treaty minutes, that they were kept away by French influence he sent for them and they finally came and held a friendly council.

The list of outrages committed by the Indians mentioned in the minutes and discussed include Swan Island, Sheeps-cot, Richmond, Brunswick, North Yarmouth, New Meadows, and others.

SYNOPSIS. This contains a summary of several meetings in the years 1755 and 1756. They relate principally to the war with the Delawares and Shawnese. The first conference was December 7th, 1755, with five of the Six Nations, at which Johnson informs them of the depredations of the Delawares and advises them to put a stop to their barbarities as the Delawares are supposed to be Dependents of the Six Nations.

The next account is December 26. Three tribes of the Six Nations who say they are looking after the River Indians and Shawnese and ask for a fort to protect them from the French. For some reason Johnson's answer to this speech was not given until 17th February, 1756. Then follows a letter from the Rev. Gideon Hawley to Sir William Johnson written at the request of the messengers sent by the Six Nations at Johnson's request to the Delawares. The letter is dated Onhughquagey, December 27th, 1755. It gives the Delaware version of the cause of their taking up the hatchet.

Johnson had called a general Indian Council and it began on February 16th, 1756, although some of the Indians had arrived before and speeches are given as early as February 2nd. At this conference all matters of importance to the Indians and English were discussed. Johnson tells them of the death of Braddock, congratulates them on the success at Lake George and warns the Six Nations that if they do not now exert the authority they claim over the Delawares that they will soon have the latter for enemies instead of friends. This conference extended through the whole month of February. It was SYNOPSIS. Although this is not an official treaty it deserves mention as an attempt to mediate between the Delawares who were on the warpath and the Province of Pennsylvania which had just declared war on them. The conference took place at the house of Israel Pemberton on the 19th, 21st and 23rd, Fourth Month. There were present on the 21st, twenty Quakers, seven Indians and some Indian women and Conrad Weiser, Daniel Claus and Andrew Montour as Interpreters.

The Quakers reminded the Indians of the peaceful conduct of their forefathers and assured them of their good feeling and asked the Indians to find some way to reach the Delawares and persuade them to make peace. The Indians replied that they were glad to know that there were some people left with peaceful principles. "We thought that the people of that profession were all dead or buried in the bushes or in the ashes." They promised to send messengers to the Delawares but advised the Quakers that it would be dangerous for any of them to attempt to go.

An account of this conference is also given in the Account of Conferences with Sir Wm. Johnson printed in London the same year. See No. 34.

The volume also contains addresses to the Lt. Governor and the General Assembly with the Lt. Governor's answer and the Proclamation declaring war on the Delawares.

SYNOPSIS. The Preface gives a good summary of Indian affairs for 1755 and 1756. Johnson had held a treaty in February with the Six Nations and asked them to remonstrate with the Delawares and Shawnese who were devastating the frontiers of Pennsylvania. The messengers sent by the Six Nations to these two tribes returned in April with a belt asking Sir William to meet them at Onondaga in May or June at a great Council of the Six Nations. Johnson went to Onondaga in June, but the Delawares and Shawnese did not appear until the Council Fire had been covered, so he invited them to meet him at Ft. Johnson and this folio records the treaty so held.

Sir William as usual was very frank in his speech about the perfidy of the Shawnese and Delawares, but told them he was willing to believe they were bewitched by the French. If they had real grievances he was willing to remove them and if they were willing to cease their depredations he was ready to make a peace. To this the "Delaware King or Chief" [probably Teedyuscung] replied he would inform his people on his return home of what had been said and send an answer. At this Sir William called a meeting of the few chiefs of the Six Nations and told them what he intended to say to the Delawares and asked them to second it. They in turn gave the Delawares a scolding so that the next day the Delaware chief promised to keep his people at Tioga quiet but said he had no control of the Delawares who lived near the French at Ft. Duquesne.

An interesting episode at this treaty was the receipt during the council of the king's patent creating Johnson a baronet and appointing him sole agent of Indian affairs. He showed and explained the patent to the Indians. A Seneca Chief made a congratulatory speech and Sir William furnished a "tub of punch."

SYNOPSIS. This is a record of two conferences and two messages to the Indians in an attempt to stop the Indian depredations on the frontiers. The first message refers to the conference in February at Ft. Johnson and the one at the home of Israel Pemberton in April and is dated Phila. April, 1756. The Governor sends a message to the Delawares and Shawnese on the Susquehanna by some of the Indians who were at Pemberton's. He offers peace if they give up their captives.

The second item in the book is the account of a conference at Easton beginning July 28, 1756, with Teedyuscung and fourteen other Delawares. In his speech the Governor recounts the causes of the trouble with the Delawares and Shawnese in great detail and Teedyuscung promised to do all the English asked. The account shows something of the amount of wampum required for a treaty.

The third part of the book is a council at Easton beginning November 8th, with the Delawares and Shawnese. Teedyuscung is again in the lime-light quibbling on his old grievance about land. Captain Newcastle, one of the Sachems of the Six Nations who attended the conference in July, had died in the meantime.

SYNOPSIS. These minutes cover two distinct conferences; the first was held at the house of John Harris in April with George Croghan alone of the whites and the second in May at Lancaster at which Governor Denny attended with a large following. At both places there were deputies from all of the Six Nations and also from the Delawares, Nanticokes and Conestogas. The printed account is George Croghan's report to Sir Wm. Johnson of the Minutes kept at the conferences. There is also a report of Conrad Weiser of a journey to Shamokin in April, 1743, on the affairs of Virginia and Maryland.

It was expected that Teedyuscung and his Delaware followers would come to the treaty to settle the complaints he had made the previous year at Easton but although the Indians waited more than a month for him he did not come. He sent various excuses, one of which was a shortage of provisions, on which the Governor sent him a supply but still he did not come. The Mohawks said the Delawares had sent them a haughty speech in which they said they were no longer subject to the Six Nations. It was evident that Teedyuscung did not want to treat with the whites when the Mohawks were present. This appeared later in the year at the treaty at Easton. The conferences were of some interest and importance but the results were small.

SYNOPSIS. The year 1757 was exceptional for treaties with the Indians. At the same time that this treaty was being held at Ft. Johnson, George Croghan, Sir Wm. Johnson's deputy, was meeting the deputies of these and other Indians at Harris Ferry and Lancaster. These delegates came to Ft. Johnson by an error. In the previous January Sir William had sent a belt to the Shawnese Chief for information and with a request that they would be ready to join the English arms if they should be called upon. The message was understood by them to be an invitation to a council at Ft. Johnson and they came accordingly. Sir William was equal to the occasion and made them welcome and by his good address and diplomacy secured their friendship and sent them home well pleased. The Mohickanders gave him an interesting account of how they happened to be living at Otsiningo on the Susquehanna with the Shawnese and Nanticokes.

The proceedings also give an account of why the Cayugas were not present. They had intended to come with these Indians having been asked by Sir William to come to Ft. Johnson but they had received intelligence from the Oneidas that the latter expected to be attacked by the French and the Cayugas were therefore holding themselves ready to assist the Oneidas.

SYNOPSIS. There were present Governor Denny with his Council and many other officials and citizens, Teedyuscung and the representatives of the Ten Nations, i.e. the Six Nations with the Delawares, Shawnese, Nanticokes and Mohicans. George Croghan attended to represent Sir William Johnson and wrote the published report. Thomas McKee, Conrad Weiser and John Pumpshire were the Interpreters.

The Treaty was a most important one, for at it peace was made between the Province of Pennsylvania and the Indians that had for years devastated frontiers. Teedyuscung did most of the talking for the Indians and proved a most difficult person to negotiate with. The fact that the Six Nations had called the Delawares women and forbidden them to sell land still rankled in his mind and he insisted on taking up some of the old land questions which Governor Denny told him had been referred by the Crown to Sir William Johnson to investigate and settle. He objected to going before Sir William whom he said he did not know though he admitted that he was the great friend of the Indians. Evidently he feared to meet there the great men of the Six Nations who would take charge of affairs and relegate him to a back seat. So captious was he that he was finally reproved by another Delaware Chief who said, "What, has not our brother desired you to bring us down by the hand to make Peace? Why don't you do it? We have been here these twenty days and have heard nothing but scolding and disputing about land. Settle the Peace and let all these disputes stand till after." The peace was finally declared, the Indians gave up some of the prisoners they had taken and promised to send in the others.

The official deliberations began on July 25th and ended on August 7th.

(L.S.) By His Excellency FRANCIS BERNARD, Esq; Captain General Governor, and Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Colony of New-Jersey, &c

To Teydeulung, King of the Delaware Indians, by Moses Totamy and Isaac Stelle, Messengers apointed by me; Greeting.

I WAS surpris'd on my Arrival here, with his Majesty's Royal Commission, as Governor of this his Province, to find, that Invasions have been lately made on the Inhabitants of this Colony, and much Blood shed by Indians, supposed to be those of Minisink or Pompton, who have resided within this Colony, and have some Time since withdrawn themselves. And as I have no Knowledge of any Reason they, or any of them, have for being discontented, or offering Violence to the Inhabitants of his Majesty's Colony under my Government, and no publick Complaints have been made by the Indians of Minisink or Pompton, formerly Inhabitants of this Colony, at any of the Conferences held between the Commissioners of New-Jersey, and the Indian Inhabitants of the same, to prevent any further Hostilities, I hereby send you this Power, to go to the Indians of Minisink and Pompton, formerly Inhabitants of this Colony, and in my Name, to desire them to desist from Hostilities, and kindly to invite them to a Conference with this Colony; and to assure them that they shall be received in the most friendly Manner, and every Endeavour shall be used to establish and confirm a Friendship between the Subjects of our Great King GEORGE, our common Father, and them, as a Thing of the greatest Use. You are to enforce the natural Affection between us and them, and how much it is for their Interest to be at Peace with a People, who have the Means of making them happy and easy, and have, by the Blessings of Providence, Provisions, and every Necessary of Life in plenty, sufficient to supply their Friends in Distress.

SYNOPSIS. The first item in this paper is a letter from Governor Bernard to Teedyuscung to the effect that depredations on the New Jersey settlers have been committed by the Minisink Indians and the Governor asks him to confer with that tribe and invite them to a conference. This letter which constitutes the "Message" is dated 25 June, 1758.

The conference was attended by the Governor and several members of the Council and the Indians with John Pumpshire as interpreter. After the usual formalities the Indians informed the Governor that they received his overtures for peace with great pleasure and suggested a council at the Forks of the Delaware where the Council Fire was kindled at the next full moon after that date. To this suggestion the Governor agreed.

SYNOPSIS. Present, Governors Denny and Bernard with their Commissioners and others. George Croghan, Deputy agent under Sir Wm. Johnson, 507 Indians representing fifteen tribes and Conrad Weiser, Henry Montour, Stephen Calvin, Isaac Stille and Moses Titany, Interpreters. This conference was held to settle many things left undone at the Treaty made at Easton in 1757. At that treaty Teedyuscung, the Delaware chief, had been the chief man and done all the talking for the Indians but now the great chiefs of the Six Nations were present and one of the first questions they asked was "Who made Teedyuscung a great man and wherefore is he called a King?" He was careful at this Conference to call the Six Nations "Uncles" and they treated him with scant courtesy. He had promised the previous year to return all the captives he had, which he had not done. One of the Oneida Chiefs rebuked him saying: "Remember, cousin, you have made this promise in our presence. You did it indeed before and you ought to have performed it. It is a shame for one who calls himself a great man to tell Lies," with much more to the same effect.

Many land matters were taken up and the government of Pennsylvania agreed to renounce its claim to part of the land it had bought at Albany three years before and deed it back to the Indians. New Jersey also settled the claim of the Minnisinks for all the land they claimed in New Jersey.

SYNOPSIS. Present Lt. Gov. James Hamilton and others with representatives of the eight tribes to the amount of nearly 500. Samuel Weiser, James Sherlock, Joseph Pepy, Interpreters. The conference began August 3rd and ended August 12th. The business of the treaty consisted largely of questions about law and captives. Teedyuscung was there again trying to open up questions that he himself had settled at previous treaties. The question of the settlement made by the Connecticut claimants at Wyoming was discussed. The Indians were requested to annul the sale of any lands they had sold to Connecticut settlers. The Cayugas said they had given to Sir Wm. Johnson all the white captives of their tribe, but the Delawares and others had not complied with their promise made at Easton in 1758 to do so.

SYNOPSIS. The conference began August 11th and ended August 28th. Present Lt. Gov. James Hamilton and others with representatives of the Delawares, Shawnese, Twightees, Wawachtanies, Tuscaroras and Kickapos. Isaac Stille and Frederick Post Interpreters. These were all from the Ohio country or the West. On the 14th representatives of the Senecas, Onondagas, Cayugas, Oneidas and Conoys attended. The affairs of this conference were most interesting from the fact that many captives were brought to the meeting to be given up and as the names of these captives are given as well as their captors and the localities where they were taken, the printed minutes take on an interest that is lacking in some printed treaties.

The Connecticut claims to land at Wyoming were discussed and the Indians said that Connecticut had paid some Indians $2,000.00 for this land but that the sale had never been discussed in the Councils of the Six Nations and was therefore void.

Teedyuscung was again in evidence and his affairs were finally disposed of.

SYNOPSIS. The first twenty-one pages are taken up with the correspondence and deliberations over the place of holding the treaty, Augusta being finally determined upon. The Congress was finally opened November 5 with Governors Wright of Georgia, Boone of South Carolina, Dobbs of North Carolina, and Lt. Gov. Fauquier and Superintendent John Stuart representing the Southern Colonies and about 700 Indians of the Cherokees, Choctaws, Chickasaws, Creeks and Catawbas. The Interpreters were John Butler, James Beamer, John Watts, James Colbert, Stephen Forrest and John Proctor. Governor Wright opened the conference and made Superintendent Stuart spokesman for the whites. The minutes of the proceedings and reports of the various speeches occupy pages 21 to 38, in which much friendship is professed on both sides, one Indian saying they were "as good friends as if they had sucked one breast." He thought the Traders made all the trouble and thought their number should be limited to two.

Pages 38-41 record the Treaty agreed upon. The white people were to be secure. The Indians forgiven past offenses. They were to live together as one people. The Traders were to be protected. Justice was to rule and all murderers were to be executed. And the Boundaries occupied by the various tribes and the Whites were defined. The remainder is devoted to correspondence about the treaty in which is expressed distrust in the good faith of the Creeks. Fifty copies of the Treaty were ordered printed. The Conference was a very important one and the foregoing gives no idea of the details of the grievances of both sides that were discussed.

It is said that it was also issued without imprint and date but I have not seen such a copy.

SYNOPSIS. In the spring of 1763, a number of Traders were plundered by the Shawnese, Delawares and others of the Ohio River Indians of goods and furs to the value as was claimed of £80,000. They represented their case to Sir Wm. Johnson, who laid it before the Indians at the councils held at Ft. Johnson in 1765 and 1768. At the latter the Indians agreed to give the traders a tract of land south of the Ohio, and bordering on it and on the Monongahela in payment. This grant by the Indians was not confirmed by the King in 1770 when he ratified the treaty of 1768 establishing a boundary line but the case was reserved for later consideration.

To more effectually prosecute their claims the traders gave power of attorney to William Trent and during the negotiations and lobbying necessary in London to get it allowed it became known as the "Case of Wm. Trent."

Probably the first publication to contain these treaties is the "Case." It is a quarto 10½ inches by 8¼ with 8 pp. giving a résumé of the traders' case, and 24 pp. of Appendix which prints the Minutes of the two treaties and the Indians deeds. This quarto I have seen only in the New York Public Library, and that copy shows no evidence of ever having had a title page; the only title is the caption to the first leaf, CASE. It was probably printed in London about 1770. The Appendix of the "Case" is the same as the "View of the Title to Indiana" except that in the latter the legal opinions of Dagge and others have been added.

This same subject is discussed in "Report of the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations on the Petition . . . for a Grant of Land on the River Ohio," etc. Lond. 1772. The treaties were again reprinted in "Plain Facts: being an Examination into the Wharton and Franklin were both interested in pressing the Claim at London and it is not improbable that some of the tracts relating to it were written by them. The whole case became a great land scheme which was finally combined with others and was known then as The "Walpole Company."

SYNOPSIS. This conference was between George Croghan, Deputy Agent for Indian Affairs, and Indians of the Six Nations, Delawares, Shawnese, Munseys and Mohicans. Over 1100 Indians attended. Henry Montour was Interpreter.

The murders of Indians and whites was the first business and a list of them is given. A Shawnese Chief accused the whites of holding forts in the Ohio country against the wishes of the Indians but he was reproved by a speaker of the Six Nations who said that it was agreed that when the French were driven out the English should hold their forts. The alleged treaty of Col. Bradstreet with the Indians in 1764 was produced to confound the Shawnese in their contention.

One of the interesting cases considered was a settlement made at Redstone Creek by some Pennsylvanians. They were ordered to leave by the Governor but the Indians objected and asked them to remain.
